POP Allston to kick off with party, offers shops a launch pad

The new space on Commonwealth Ave. has a skatepark, a vintage market and a ton more.

For Allston residents, the first weekend of September means that many are just about finished unpacking their earthly possessions and getting accustomed to new homes. As a welcoming fiesta, Allston Village Main Streets and Do617 are hosting the free, all-ages first Allston Christmas Block Party at the new POP Allston space.

"Allston is the most bumping part of Boston," Vivant Vintage owner Justin Pomerleau said. "It's changing fast and we want to bring a punk/gypsy market feeling to an already vibrant area."

POP Allston will open its doors for the first time from noon to 6 p.m. on Sept. 7 with live music, food and plenty of merchandise for sale. The space also offers a yoga studio, a DIY bike shop and artist studios.

Allston Village Main Streets are encouraging people to walk, bike or take the T to the venue or even take advantage of a free bike valet service provided by CommonWheels Bicycle Co-op.

The three-story space has two floors worth of a skate park, where Orchard Skate Shop owner Armin Bachman will teach skate lessons.

"This is a very creative and interpretive space for skateboarding," Bachman said. "This is a jump-off point for all of us involved. It's amazing that it all came together."

They are also opening a new shop in the North End near Hanover and Commercial streets with the coming of the long-awaited skate park in East Cambridge.

"This is a great time for people to come try out skating if they are new to it, or brush up if they already have some skills," Bachman said. "We want skateboarding in Boston to be accessible for people of all walks of life. This block party is the perfect place to set that in motion."

Pomerleau is also debuting a new project, the Oliver Best Vintage Market, which is a huge flea market that will run every Saturday from Sept. 19 into May. The Labor Day event will have 25 vintage dealers and six vintage arcade cabinets from BitFest, offering everything from odd and interesting antiques to throwback-style clothes.

"We want this to be an all-year-around destination," Pomerleau said. "We want this to be around in the winter so people will have a place to go when the weather is awful. People now can have a place to spend a day when they need to get out of the house and check out really cool stuff."

Opiate blocker. Deal to lower cost of Narcan for first responders: AG

The producers of the opioid overdose reversal drug Narcan will pay into a new state trust fund to help make the medication more affordable to first responders in Massachusetts, AG Maura Healey announced.

Since the beginning of the heroin and pain medication crisis, the price of Narcan (naloxone) has shot up given the high demand. Healey announced that her office has come up with a solution by partnering with Amphastar Pharmaceuticals, making a $325,000 deal to offset the costs of the drug.

"The demand for Narcan to help save the lives of overdose victims has risen sharply, and with that so has the price, making it tough for police and fire departments to access," Healey said. "This money will help us get Narcan into the hands of every first responder, giving them a tool they need to help save lives." NATE HOMAN

Cops ID man killed in weekend shooting

Boston Police have identified a man who was shot and killed amid a weekend of violence that saw five people shot, with one dead.

Three people were shot on Creston Street off of Blue Hill Avenue in Roxbury early Saturday morning.

One person was shot in the leg and another was hit in the arm. The third man died from his wounds at the hospital. He has been identified as Tedford Davis, 27, of Boston.

There were two other shootings on Saturday.

One was on the 1500 block of Blue Hill Avenue and the other was on Bowdoin Street.

Police said that these were nonfatal shootings.

Protest at City Hall after BPD 'hands on neck' video

Rally. Mass. Action Against Police Brutality hosted the event in support of Elvin Vargas, 18.

Protesters in City Hall Plaza called for the firing of a Boston cop and a change in attitude from Mayor Walsh Monday in response to a video of what they called police brutality in Roslindale.

The footage, posted online Aug. 23, shows BPD officer Ted Rivera with his hands around the neck of 18-year-old Elvin Vargas during an arrest earlier this month. The video shows police take Vargas into custody after he shouted obscenities at officers — "F— the police," Vargas yelled — and shows Rivera put his hands around Vargas' neck as he forces him into a police cruiser.

Vargas, protesters said, faced brutality for speaking his mind.

"I have a right to say what I want to say," said Sirad Zahra of Roxbury into a megaphone to a few dozen people on the plaza steps. "And I say 'f— the police' all day!"

Zahra was among the co-organizers for the event, hosted by Mass. Action Against Police Brutality.

Protesters called for officer Rivera's firing and said they wanted to call attention to a culture of fear and distrust between police and the community.

Boston police, said protest co-organizer Nino Brown in a speech to the few dozen people gathered on the plaza steps Monday, are "choking the life out of our youth" and are "the blue line between the poor and the rich. They are the enforcers of the racist status quo. We are here to raise awareness, to mobilize and continue to organize."

Overrun. Officials want to know: What went wrong with Green Line Extension?

State transportation officials are considering hiring an outside consultant to investigate why a budget estimate for the MBTA Green Line Extension project was off by $1 billion.

How a price tag for the project to expand the Green Line through Somerville and into Medford could grow that much in such a short time — it increased to $3 billion over the latest estimate of about $2 billion — is a question officials hope to answer by tapping third-party experts.

"One of the things I'm perplexed by is that this was vetted by federal agencies, a number of different agencies," said board member Brian Lang. "It's mind-blowing to me that so many looked at it and said, 'Yeah, this makes sense — the numbers line up,' and for it to be so far off."

The cost estimate for the project grew as design phases moved forward — from $953 million in 2010 to $1.4 billion in 2013 and just shy of $2 billion in 2014, T officials said in a report. State Transportation Secretary Stephanie Pollack said MassDOT would be responsible for paying the cost of hiring consultants. On the table is whether there was a management failure behind the cost spike, she said.

To see costs rise so sharply likely means "something broke down somewhere along the line," said Joe Aiello, the board's chairman.

Without a good diagnosis of what went wrong and without the trust of taxpayers, board members said, the much-anticipated Green Line Extension could be a no-go for the state.

"I don't think that we can justify any decision going forward without giving a full explanation of how we got here in the first place," said board member Monica Tibbits-Nutt.

‘Deflategate’ judge to rule after talks fail

Dropped the ball. A federal judge has announced that he will rule soon on Brady’s suspension.

The National Football League and its players union failed to reach a settlement in their dispute over New England quarterback Tom Brady’s four-game “Deflategate” suspension despite weeks of talks, leaving a federal judge to resolve the issue in the coming days.

Following a final round of unsuccessful private discussions, U.S. District Judge Richard Berman said at a brief court hearing on Monday that he will likely decide whether to uphold or throw out the suspension within one or two days.

In any case, Berman said, he will issue his ruling before Friday, at the request of the league and the union. The Patriots open the regular season on Sept. 10 at home in Gillette Stadium against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Brady was suspended by the NFL for four games over his alleged role in a scheme to deflate footballs used in the Patriots’ 45-7 victory over the Indianapolis Colts in a January playoff game. The win sent New England to the Super Bowl, where it defeated the Seattle Seahawks 28-24.

With dozens of news cameras set up outside the courthouse, Brady and NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell arrived within moments of each other around 9:30 a.m.

Five things you need to know

1 Houston-area deputy shooting suspect appears in court

A 30-year-old Houston man facing a charge of capital murder in the killing of a deputy was arraigned on Monday in a case the county sheriff tied to the Black Lives Matter campaign against police violence.

Shannon Miles did not enter a plea at the court proceeding, where Harris County District Attorney Devon Anderson detailed the case against him.

Miles, who is being held without bond, is accused of fatally shooting Deputy Darren Goforth in the back on Friday evening at a Houston-area gas station as Goforth fueled his patrol car.

Deputies found Goforth face down in a pool of blood near his patrol car, dead from multiple gunshot wounds, Anderson said in court. Fifteen 40-caliber shell casings were around him, she said.

Surveillance video showed a black male shooting Goforth, a 10-year veteran officer, in the back of the head and standing over Goforth and shooting more, Anderson said.

Deputies searched Miles' garage and found a loaded 40-caliber gun and the same brand of ammunition as the casings found at the scene, Anderson said. Forensic testing determined the gun was the one fired at the scene, she said. REUTERS

2 Hurricane Fred forms in the Atlantic

Hurricane Fred strengthened Monday in the eastern Atlantic as it approached the Cape Verde islands, while the remnants of Tropical Storm Erika brought flooding to parts of South Carolina, according to U.S. forecasters.

The center of Fred is expected to pass near or over the northwestern Cape Verde islands, an archipelago off the west coast of Africa.

Fred had maximum sustained winds of 85 mph but was expected to gradually dissipate after passing the Cape Verde islands, the National Hurricane Center said.

Fred was not expected to threaten the Caribbean or the United States. REUTERS

3 Hillary Clinton supports ban on bonuses

Hillary Clinton endorsed a proposed law that would prevent corporate firms paying bonuses to their executives for leaving to take senior government jobs.

Clinton, in an op-ed published by the Huffington Post, was critical of the "so-called revolving door" between government and Wall Street firms in particular, saying it erodes public trust "if a public servant's past and future are tied to the financial industry."

Support for the proposed Financial Services Conflict of Interest Act has become a sort of litmus test for the Democratic Party's progressive wing. REUTERS

4 Arizona mother accused of drowning twin sons in bathtub

An Arizona woman was arrested for murder on Sunday on suspicion of drowning her 2-year-old twin sons in a bathtub and attempting to do the same with another child, authorities said.

Mireya Lopez, 22, was taken into custody at a suburban residence west of Phoenix, facing two counts of first-degree murder and one count of attempted murder, police said.

"She was very open and honest with our investigators that she did it," said Sgt. Brandon Busse, an Avondale, Arizona, police spokesman. The motive, however, was not immediately clear. REUTERS

5 Dating site aims to mix work with pleasure

EHarmony plans to launch its recruitment service — Elevated Careers — in 2016, and it expects the business to contribute about 60 percent of the company's revenue within three years.

In the meantime, visitors to elevatedcareers.com can sign up either as a job-seeker or recruiter.

Work on the project has been underway for more than a year. "It's so important that Elevated Careers is developed to eHarmony standards via client feedback," a spokeswoman said. REUTERS

White House. Obama considering array of options for closing Gitmo

The White House is considering a "wide array" of options for closing the U.S. military prison in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, spokesman Josh Earnest said on Monday, declining to rule out executive action as an option.

Earnest said the best route for closing the prison would be winning congressional approval to do so.

The White House said last month that it would soon be sending a plan to Congress to close the prison, which President Barack Obama has made a priority.

Asked if Obama would consider taking executive action to close the prison if Congress blocks him, Earnest said, "The president and his team are always considering a wide array of options.

"But the fact is the best way for us to do this is for members of Congress of both parties to work effectively with the administration," Earnest said.

Closing the prison is likely to involve transferring some detainees to prisons within the United States. Republicans have barred those transfers and already have begun to push back against suggestions floated by the administration as possible host sites.

Defense Secretary Ash Carter said on Aug. 20 that a U.S. Army delegation had visited a potential facility in Leavenworth, Kansas, and would soon tour the U.S. Naval Consolidated Brig at Charleston, South Carolina. REUTERS

Migrant trains reach Vienna, EU asylum rules under strain

Past three days. Hungarian police said they had caught 8,792 migrants crossing into the country.

Trains carrying hundreds of migrants started arriving in Vienna on Monday after Austrian authorities appeared to give up trying to apply European Union rules by filtering out refugees who had already claimed asylum in Hungary.

In the latest twist in a humanitarian and political crisis that is now testing the survival of both Europe's open-border regime and its asylum rules, Hungary allowed the migrants, many of them fleeing Syria's civil war, to cram into four trains leaving Budapest for Austria or Germany.

Many of the refugees arriving in a Vienna railway station on Monday evening immediately raced to board trains heading on to Germany, as policemen looked on passively, preferring not to intervene, witnesses said.

A train also arrived in Munich from Budapest on Monday evening. German police said there were about 200 on board.

Khalil described how he and his family had been able to buy train tickets in Budapest and were headed for Hamburg, Germany, adding that he was sure of seeing a better welcome there after traipsing across the Balkans and Hungary.

"As for Germany, Syrians call [Chancellor Angela] Merkel 'Mama Merkel,'" he added, referring to the German leader's relatively compassionate response so far to the crisis.

One of the trains was stuck for hours in searing summer heat at the Hungarian border town of Hegyeshalom, with Austrian railways citing safety concerns about overcrowding.

In line with EU rules, an Austrian police spokesman said only those who had not already requested asylum in Hungary would be allowed through — but the sheer pressure of numbers finally prevailed and, with few police officers or border officials reporting in the vicinity, the train moved on, apparently with all passengers still on board. Migrants

Not the final destination

Ali, 34, and his 3-year-old daughter were just happy to have found enough space to stand on their packed Austrian train bound for Munich.

"I can't wait," said Ali, who, like many of the Syrian migrants, hopes to join up with relatives already in Germany.

Children slept on the floors of carriages, exhausted. The air was thick with body odor.

The migrants' plight highlights the huge challenge facing the European Union, which has eliminated border controls between 26 states of the Schengen Area but requires new asylum seekers to apply in the first country they enter.

Most migrants have no intention of staying in Hungary, even those who register there, but aim to reach richer western European countries. REUTERS

1 Kanye West has some weird rules for Kim

Kanye West continues to do the impossible. This time, he's making me feel bad for Kim Kardashian. Gobsmacked sources claim that West has added a brand-new entry to his list of strict rules Kardashian must adhere to when it comes to her appearance and behavior. The new latest? She apparently has to make sure to "never let her gaze leave the stage" when her husband is performing, according to Radar Online, with sources claiming the rule was established after West spotted her texting during one of his gigs. "Kanye was furious and told her how disrespectful it is to him as an artist," a source says. "Kim's now terrified to turn to speak to someone when she's in the audience." Instead, she's supposed to "look mesmerized" by his "genius" for the entire set. Seems reasonable.

"It's just another new law in a long list of rules, from Kim's wardrobe, hair and body shape to who she can and can't talk to," the source explains. "How long she's going to put up with this is anyone's guess." I don't know — if he's asking Kim Kardashian to not look at her phone, I'm guessing she's not going to put up with it for very long.

Daily video

Donald Trump says 'China'

Donald Trump is obviously a frightening joke that isn't going away, but at least we can have some fun with him before things get really awful. Case in point: this video from the Huffington Post that's a mashup of Trump saying, well, "China." The country is one of his favorite talking points, so there's lots of material. The jury is still out, though, on whether this is kind of weirdly Zen or if it will make your brain melt and dribble out your ears. Let's find out! Can you go the whole three minutes?

2 Shia LaBeouf finds a girl on his hair level

Shia LaBeouf has apparently moved on following that awkward videotaped fight with Mia Goth, and this time he's found someone who shares his passion for grungy, braided and matted hair. LaBeouf was spotted out and about holding hands with his "American Honey" co-star Sasha Lane and her impressive hair, both of their braids bopping along on their probably not recently washed heads. The question stands, though: If they're busy having lunch in L.A., aren't they missing Burning Man?

3 Fun trainwreck Lindsay Lohan is back!

Good news, team! Good, old, crazy Lindsay Lohan is making a comeback. Or at least that's what it seems like with the details of a Page Six report about Lohan behaving erratically at an Italian wedding and insisting she'd been drugged. (Hey, if anyone would know what it feels like to be drugged…) While attending the nuptials of tourism ambassador Justin Etzin and model Lana Zakocela, Lohan "was painting her nails during the ceremony and looking at her phone," which seems like sober behavior for her, honestly. And later she "was running around naked saying she was drugged" before retreating to her villa.

But don't worry, the wedding was no isolated incident. Sources also claim that Lohan turned heads at a DJing gig — she's also a DJ, apparently — by just playing the Brandy and Monica duet "The Boy Is Mine" on a loop. Then she "got upset when she thought someone took her photo," the source adds. "She was speaking in a British accent." Because of course she was. Welcome back, darling.

4 Wait, Chet Haze is missing?

So, anybody seen Chet Haze? The obnoxious rapping offspring of Tom Hanks has apparently been AWOL for a month or so, at least according to Star magazine's crack team of investigators. Haze last communicated with the world via an Instagram post on July 23, saying he was "gonna go get my mind right." And after that, "a month went by without a word from Chet — not even a single phone call to his family or friends," a source tells the magazine. "It's like he's fallen off the face of the earth." Well, not completely fallen off, as apparently someone's been tracking his cellphone's GPS, which allegedly reveals he's in the meth-filled desert town of Barstow, California. This certainly won't end poorly.

Shake-up. What to change in Season 4 of 'House of Cards'

Sorry, Frank. It's time for things to get tougher for you. NETFLIX

The three seasons of "House of Cards" have taken Frank Underwood from a powerful but low-profile position as majority whip to president of the United States. It's been an impressive couple of years for Mr. Underwood (helped along, of course, by a series of betrayals and the occasional murder), but we wonder if the show hasn't lost something by having him rise so quickly. We have a few ideas about how they can turn things around.

The fall of Frank Underwood

With Claire (spoilers, if you're behind on your Netflix duties) leaving him and his empire teetering, the next season seems likely to be about Frank's downfall. Great! The character so far has been perpetually smarter than everyone else, and it's time for some payback. Having Frank resort to desperate measures to maintain his throne would be tons of fun.

Reveal more about Frank's marriage

The marriage of Frank and Claire has long been the silent third lead on the show. Is Frank gay? How much of their unusual marriage is openly discussed between them? While the mystery has worked, Claire leaving creates an opening to learn what's really been going on.

Kill off Doug

While we're fans of Michael Kelly's performance as Underwood's merciless right-hand man Doug, his plots have taken him further and further afield. His slow stalking, kidnapping and eventual murder of a woman whose connection to the main story no longer exists took things to an unnecessarily grim place. This show may be cynical and soapy, but everything with Doug seemed like it came from some other, bleaker show. Just write him off already. LISA WEIDENFELD

"Drunk History" returns tonight at 10:30 on Comedy Central. / COMEDY CENTRAL

Brush up on your (drunk) history

Interview. "Drunk History" mastermind Derek Waters shares a few tricks of the trade.

We've all been at a party where someone who's had a bit too much to drink tells an endless story. It can get tedious. But what if you saved the audio and had celebrities act out what they were saying? Oh, and the stories are about famous figures in history, so you get Abraham Lincoln rambling along in the voice of a drunk person. The result is pretty funny, which is why "Drunk History" graduated from being a very popular YouTube series to a Comedy Central show. The fourth season premieres today and we talked to creator Derek Waters about what it's like to work on the show.

Which celebrities do you have guest starring this season?
It's the best cast. The ones that come out easily to say are Octavia Spencer, Will Ferrell, Sam Rockwell, Dennis Quaid, Parker Posey, [who's] one of my all-time favorites. Jason Alexander. Lots of new faces — acting and new narrators.

And what events will they be portraying?
We got 39 brand-new stories. With Octavia Spencer, she is playing Harriet Tubman. We've all learned about her as someone freeing the slaves, but she was also a spy, which very few people know. That is in our themed episode all about spies, which is also where Will Ferrell plays Roald Dahl, the children's book author who was also a British spy.

The drunk narrators are all from the comedy scene. Is it hard to get them to stick to their stories?
I wouldn't compare it to a lion tamer, but there are certain things I've learned that you have to expect to happen. The first hour and a half is usually like any human being would do, trying to be funny. I always say the only thing worse than trying to be funny is watching someone try to be funny. But that's just the nature of the beast. You combine alcohol and a camera with someone who does comedy — that's just going to happen.

GETTY IMAGES

How do you know when they're at the right level of drunk to tell the story?
As soon as someone tells you a story, or even says one thing, like, "Did I tell you he had a mustache?" and they've told you that about eight times, you know, OK, this is a certain level of drunk where they don't need to drink anymore — let's start talking. As soon as the repeating starts, that's usually a good place.

Why history?
The idea started with a friend, the actor Jake Johnson ["New Girl"], telling me a story about Otis Redding that I wanted to reenact, but I still don't think the story he told me was true. I think everyone gets drunk and talks about music, so I wanted to find something that people don't get drunk and talk about, and something that, when someone messes up, you could kind of know where the mistakes were. And I thought history was the only thing we have "proof" for because of history books.

Do people puke often?
Thank God, not as much. Because I'm not a fan of puking. Contrary to popular belief, I am not a fan of vomiting. But I am a fan of the comedy of someone puking while they're telling the story, and then after they vomit, they still want to tell you the story. That I'll always find funny.

Expert advice

What's the best storytelling drink?
In my opinion, it's whiskey because it's smooth, and it also makes you feel smart.

It's good to feel smart while you're talking about history.
It gives you a sense of confidence and strength. That would be my guess. Wine makes you fall asleep and talk forever — you fall asleep talking. And tequila makes you crazy. No question about that.

Enjoy your weekend.

Aries Work alone and avoid confrontations. The busier you are, the less time you will have to work yourself into a state of duress.

Taurus Financial gains will be made if you do your homework. Consider the fallout that will ensue if you get involved in a dubious situation.

Gemini Make a difference. Get involved with an organization or political group, and set the stage to make beneficial reforms.

Cancer Think before you speak. Emotional confrontations are inevitable if you are critical. Don't expect everyone to agree with you.

Leo Consider starting a small business or partnership with someone you feel akin to. Present and promote what you have to offer.

Virgo Improvements to your living quarters will increase their appeal and value. You will find an unusual way to drum up the funds you need.

Libra The more help you offer, the more you will receive. Join forces with others to help a cause and together you will make a difference.

Scorpio Ask for a raise, or consider starting your own business. Highlight your unique qualities to those in a position to help you out.

Sagittarius Attempting to live up to another person's expectations is a waste of time. Take the path best suited to bring you self-satisfaction.

Capricorn Check out property investments to get an idea of the options available to you as well as the corners you must cut to take on expenses.

Aquarius Someone you have not heard from lately will surface. Once you finish your responsibilities, treat yourself to a day trip.

Pisces Things will run smoothly if you go with the flow. Complete your tasks without complaint and offer to help someone unfortunate. EUGENIA LAST

wellbeing

"Top Chef" contestant Casey Thompson lent a hand to the world No. 1 tennis champ during the cooking demo. JACOB'S CREEK

MAKE HEALTHY YOUR NEW HAPPY

The tennis star shares what does (and doesn't) get served to him, plus a personal recipe.

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

Does Novak Djokovic drink wine?

That seems like the sort of question that would be answered during a wine-tasting event at which he's the guest of honor. But Djokovic, who is in New York City for the next two weeks to defend his world No. 1 tennis title at the U.S. Open, abstained from the new Jacob's Creek Two Lands varietals at a recent event — even while cooking a personal recipe of pasta and shrimp.

Obviously, he's made of tougher stuff than the rest of us.

So what does go into that finely honed machine to make it run? Not gluten and dairy.

Growing up in Serbia, Djokovic worked as a waiter and dishwasher in his family's Italian-influenced restaurant — he describes the menu as "a lot of pizzas." His homeland is also famous for its pancakes, which he says meant "wheat was a part of my everyday life — we have bakeries around every corner."

Being surrounded by gluten took its toll, and he gave it up along with dairy five years ago. "I have a strong kind of sensitivity to gluten because of overconsumption of it," he says.

That eased once he stopped constantly eating it, and Djokovic can now indulge in the necessary evil/blessing of carbo-loading on pasta and rice before tournaments. (Dairy, however, is still off the menu.)

He also sticks to proteins that are on the lighter side. "I try to have as little animal food as possible," he says, preferring to get his fuel from plant-based sources like mushrooms, whey, tofu and chickpeas. When he does eat meat, it's chicken, fish and turkey.

And don't make the food spicy, otherwise "you would see me more off the court than on the court."

Though Djokovic admits he leaves meal prep to professionals these days, he cooks with the same laid-back, playful attitude — talking to the ingredients and, fun fact, getting squeamish about head-on shrimp — as he plays. And that's an example even those of us without any talent at tennis can use to live healthier.

Recipe

Quinoa & Pomegranate Salad

Ingredients

For the salad:
- 1 cup quinoa
- 2 cups boiling water
- ¾ cup hazelnuts
- 1 small cucumber
- 1 pomegranate
- Small handful of fresh coriander

For the dressing:
- 1 lime
- 3 tbsp. olive oil
- 2 tbsp. sesame oil
- Salt

Optional ingredients for those not sticking to a professional tennis player's diet:
- 1 tbsp. tahini
- Pepper

Directions:

1 Rinse quinoa well under running water. Place in a pan with the boiling water and a little salt. Bring to a boil, then place the lid on the pan and let it simmer for 10 to 15 minutes until all the water has been evaporated and the quinoa is fluffy.

PROVIDED

2 While the quinoa cooks, place the hazelnuts on a baking tray and roast them for 10 minutes in a 350-degree oven until they're crunchy.

3 Slice the cucumber lengthwise into quarters, then eighths. Remove the seeds, then continue slicing the cucumber into thin pieces.

4 Remove the seeds from the pomegranate. Squeeze all the juice into a separate bowl to be added to the dressing.

5 Finely chop the coriander. Mix the dressing together in a small bowl. Once the quinoa has cooked and cooled, place it in a bowl with the hazelnuts, pomegranate, coriander and cucumber, pour on the dressing and mix, adding salt and pepper to taste.

McCourty leads Patriots safeties as season nears

NFL. Will Pat Chung start opposite Devin McCourty at safety this season?

The Patriots' secondary is typically one of the team's strengths, but a few questions do arise when it comes to the safety position. / GETTY IMAGES

While one very important member of the New England Patriots' 2014-15 secondary left for "greener" pastures, another one re-signed with the squad.

Devin McCourty and the Patriots agreed on a five-year, $47.5 million contract over the offseason. The hope was that Darrelle Revis would re-sign as well, but he went back to the Jets.

McCourty has become one of the better safeties in the NFL and was paid accordingly. With him manning the deep part of the field, the Patriots can feel confident that someone they can depend on is the last line of defense.

Unless he's no longer a safety.

McCourty lined up at cornerback against the Saints last weekend, prompting fear that the Patriots may try to slide him back there to make up for lost talent.

Though McCourty is now taking the high road about it, he was not a fan of the change after the game, telling reporters, "I hope it's not permanent. As a player, that's out of your control."

He later added, "It didn't feel great, and I don't think it looked great, so we'll see."

The problem is that McCourty isn't a great cornerback. It's one of the main reasons he was moved to safety. He's better facing the action than turned away from it.

Bill Belichick knows this too, and the move — in a meaningless second preseason game — could be nothing more than emergency situation preparation.

So assuming McCourty is lining up at free safety in Week 1, who's lining up next to him? Pat Chung could once again be the guy after a successful return to the Patriots last season. Chung excelled as the strong safety that was able to stay in the box and not worry as much about the deeper part of the field where McCourty was, or anywhere on the field where Revis was.

But the starting job certainly isn't a lock for Chung, who could be fighting for it along with Duron Harmon and rookie Jordan Richards. Tavon Wilson and Nate Ebner could also contribute.

The Patriots drafted Richards in the second round, considered a reach by just about everybody not inside the Patriots' war room. But Belichick doesn't care for mock drafts. He sees a player he likes, and he drafts him. It's no wonder he likes Richards, who's played all over the field in his first two preseason games.

Belichick spoke very highly of the rookie, saying that he's been able to take what he's learning in the classroom and apply it on the field.

"It's not just a classroom thing. He's shown the ability to apply it both on defense and in the kicking game, in the running game and in the passing game," Belichick said. "He has a lot of passion and he works hard, and those things are evident, but they're also showing up in his performance and his production so that's good."

Safety in numbers

Several defensive backs are fighting for a roster spot at the safety position. Here's a look at who's in the mix.

- Longshots: Brandon King, Darryl Roberts, Dax Swanson

Resting up

Gronk, Belichick content with rest

You've seen all the devastating injuries this preseason, and your fantasy team has taken several hits during the last few weeks. But Bill Belichick is not taking any chances with the league's top tight end Rob Gronkowski, who will continue to sit out preseason games. And that's just fine with Gronk. "It's a long haul," the Patriots' star told WEEI, "so [you have to get] your body mentally and physically ready. ... If you're going full speed in practice, that can get you super-ready for Week 1."

NFL

Could Patriots be interested in Jackson?

One of the most recognizable names among the dozens of NFL players cut in the first round of roster maneuvering this preseason was the Bills' veteran running back Fred Jackson.

The 34-year-old is considered to be worn and old for his position, but a free agent now, he could be well-suited for Bill Belichick's offensive approach in New England.

A year after catching 66 passes in Buffalo, Jackson is a bigger back (6-foot-1, 216 pounds) who can run well between the tackles as well as catch balls in the backfield.

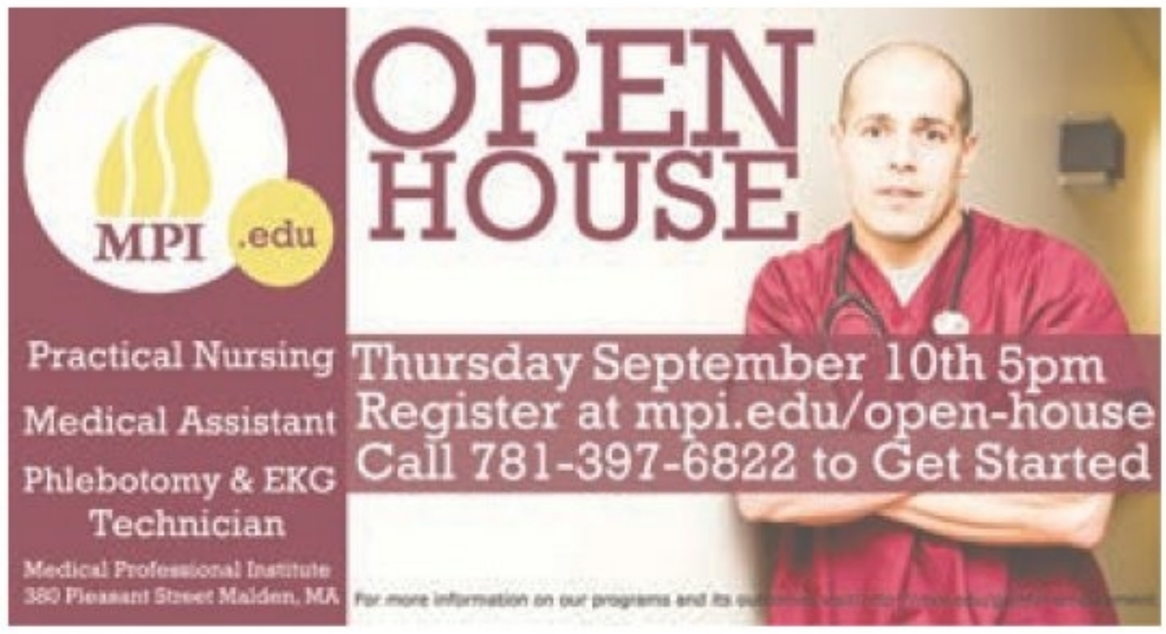
The Pats have plenty of depth behind starter LeGarrette Blount, who will sit out the team's opener due to suspension. They already boast Jonas Gray, expected to carry a large part of the workload, assisted by James White and Dion Lewis and Travaris Cadet.

The team recently showed it was comfortable bringing in veteran offensive weapons, as demonstrated by last week's acquisition of Reggie Wayne.

It is believed that there is a little flexibility in the Patriots' projected 53-man roster.

So does a spot exist, potentially, for Jackson, a man who has run for over 5,000 career yards and punched in 30 touchdowns in eight seasons?

Stay tuned. EVAN MACY



Older, wiser Federer eyes his 18th major at US Open

Tennis. Can the 34-year-old living legend continue to grow his trophy case?

Roger Federer is a 34-year-old father of not one, but two sets of twins, and he hasn't been to the finals of the U.S. Open since 2009.

The Swiss Maestro captured the last of his 17 Grand Slam singles titles back at Wimbledon in 2012.

Yet when Federer takes the court on Tuesday in Flushing Meadows for his first-round match against Leonardo Mayer, the No. 2 seed should be brimming with confidence about the chances of capturing his 18th major title during this fortnight.

Federer, who won five straight titles in Queens from 2004-08, is coming off winning on hard courts at the Western & Southern Open in Cincinnati, where he served brilliantly and attacked the net fearlessly en route to beating Andy Murray and Novak Djokovic in back-to-back matches in the semifinals and final. Overall, he is 21-2 (.913) with three titles on hard courts in 2015.

"He played a fantastic week there [in Cincinnati]," Djokovic, the No. 1 seed at the Open, said of Federer. "I still see him as one of the best players in the world, undoubtedly. He's proven that — he's No. 2 in the world. He's played the Wimbledon final. He's winning big events. He's still challenging everybody he's facing on the court. I always see him as one of the favorites everywhere he goes."

Quoted

"I think my backhand has improved with having a bigger racket head. ... My game is usually great when I move well." Roger Federer

Marin Cilic, who crushed Federer in straight sets in the semifinals last year en route to the U.S. championship, agrees.

"Roger is always going to be a contender here and at any Grand Slam," Cilic said. "I think especially the way he was playing in Cincinnati — I think it's great for everybody to see."

John McEnroe, a four-time U.S. Open champ, wondered Monday on ESPN whether Federer could still bring it for seven matches in a Grand Slam.

"The 34-year-old Federer, he's playing incredible tennis," McEnroe said. "You can see, best-of-three [sets], he can still beat anybody. The question is seven matches, best-of-five."

Whether Federer can take his game to the level he needs to win an 18th major remains to be seen, but the Swiss Maestro certainly has reason to feel confident.

TO WIT:

Unit No. 315-3 ("Unit"), a Unit in THE WASHINGTON SQUARE CONDOMINIUM ("Condominium"), created pursuant and subject to the provisions of Chapter 183A of the General Laws of Massachusetts, by Master Deed dated September 3, 1985 and filed with the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds - District of the Land Court as Document No. 395327 and noted on Master Certificate of Title No. C-99, as amended of record ("Master Deed").

The post office address of the Unit is:
Unit 315-3
315 Allston Street, Brighton (Boston), Massachusetts

Said Unit is conveyed together with the following:

1. An undivided percentage interest appertaining to the Unit in the common areas and facilities of said Condominium as set forth in the Master Deed.
2. The exclusive right and easement to use certain portions of the common areas and facilities of the Condominium as set forth in the Master Deed or in the Unit Deed to the Mortgagor (if any).

The Unit is laid out as shown on a plan attached to the first Unit Deed for said Unit, recorded with said Deeds, to which is affixed the verified statement of a registered architect, registered professional engineer or registered land surveyor, certifying that the plan shows the Unit designation of the Unit hereby conveyed and of immediately adjoining units, and that it fully and accurately depicts the layout of the Unit, its location, dimensions, approximate area, entrance, and immediate common area to which it has access, as built.

Said premises are hereby conveyed subject to and with the benefit of, as the case may be, the following:

1. The provisions of Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 183A, as amended.
2. Easements, agreements, restrictions, rights, reservations or conditions contained in or referred to in the Master Deed.
3. The terms and conditions of the Condominium Trust, By-Laws and Rules and Regulations promulgated pursuant thereto and filed with said Deeds, as amended.
4. The obligations to pay the proportionate share attributable to said Unit of common expenses.
5. Such taxes attributable to said Unit for the current fiscal year as are not now due and payable.
6. The rights of other Unit Owners to exclusively use certain common areas and facilities, as set forth in the Master Deed (if any).
7. Provisions of existing building, and zoning laws.

For mortgagor's(s') title see deed registered with Suffolk County Registry District of the Land Court as Document No. 539548, as noted on Certificate of Title No. C99-488.

These premises will be sold and conveyed subject to and with the benefit of all rights, rights of way, restrictions, easements, covenants, liens or claims in the nature of liens, improvements, public assessments, any and all unpaid taxes, tax titles, tax liens, water and sewer liens and any other municipal assessments or liens or existing encumbrances of record which are in force and are applicable, having priority over said mortgage, whether or not reference to such restrictions, easements, improvements, liens or encumbrances is made in the deed.

TERMS OF SALE:

A deposit of Five Thousand ($5,000.00) Dollars by certified or bank check will be required to be paid by the purchaser at the time and place of sale. The balance is to be paid by certified or bank check at Harmon Law Offices, P.C., 150 California Street, Newton, Massachusetts 02458, or by mail to P.O.
